MOOT PROPOSITION

The Republic of Aryavrat is a democratic nation governed by a written Constitution and follows a common law legal system similar to that of Bharat (India). Aryavrat recognises fundamental rights under its Constitution, including the right to life and personal liberty, freedom of speech and expression, and equality before the law. It also follows the legal framework outlined in the Aryavrat Nyaya Sanhita, Aryavrat Sakshya Adhinyam (ASA), and Aryavrat Family Laws, which are identical in content to those of India.

In the cosmopolitan city of Rajdeep, Sana Fatima (25), a practicing journalist and a Hindu by birth who later converted to Islam of her own will in 2022, entered into a live-in relationship with Aarav Khurana (28), a Hindu man working as a corporate lawyer. The two lived together for over 1.5 years in the city. Although their families disapproved of the relationship due to religious and social differences, the couple shared a rented apartment, held joint financial accounts, and even introduced each other as partners on various occasions.

On 11th January 2025, Aarav allegedly left the house suddenly and cut off all contact with Sana. Upon inquiring, Sana came to know through mutual friends that Aarav was getting engaged to a woman of his family's choice. Distressed, Sana approached the police station at Rajdeep and filed a complaint alleging emotional and psychological abandonment and fraud, claiming that Aarav had "promised marriage" and exploited her under the guise of a long-term live-in relationship.

Simultaneously, Sana also filed a petition before the Hon'ble High Court of Rajdweep under Article 226 of the Constitution seeking protection for her life and liberty, stating that her family and Aarav's family are threatening her for publicly speaking about their relationship and conversion. She also sought directions to declare her live-in relationship as valid and to provide legal recognition to the rights arising out of such relationship, including maintenance and protection under the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 (as applicable in Aryavrat).

Aarav, in his response, denied any promise of marriage and contended that the relationship was consensual and did not involve any legal or social commitment. He also argued that the relationship was not equivalent to a marriage and therefore, Sana is not entitled to claim rights available to a legally wedded spouse.

The State opposed the petition, stating that live-in relationships are not recognized formally in Aryavrat Law unless certain conditions akin to a presumed marriage are satisfied.

The High Court admitted the petition and referred the matter to the Hon'ble Supreme Court of Aryavrat, given the significant questions of law and public importance involved in the case.

Issues for Consideration:

1. Whether a live-in relationship of over 1.5 years, without formal marriage, entitles the woman to maintenance or protection under the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005?
2. Whether a promise of marriage in a live-in relationship, if proven, constitutes fraud or exploitation under civil or criminal law?

3. Whether the right to life and liberty under Article 21 of the Constitution of Aryavrat includes the right to choose a partner and cohabit without marriage?
4. Whether interfaith live-in relationships are protected under constitutional rights in light of personal law and social norms?
5. Whether live-in relationships should be granted legal recognition and what parameters, if any, should govern them?

Instructions to Teams:

- The Moot is limited to the issues and facts stated above. No new facts shall be introduced.
- All laws, statutes, and precedents applicable in Bharat shall be applicable in the Republic of Aryavrat.
- Each team shall argue from both the Petitioner and Respondent sides in different rounds.
- No assumption of fact is allowed unless it logically arises from the given facts.
